Seven State Show

In The Sargent Gallery . . .

The Paul Turner Sargent Gallery at Eastern recently held one of the largest art exhibits in the school's history. The Seven for '76 Regional Art Exhibition, on display between September 7 and October 13 was "the largest ever assembled by our own staff," said Sargent Gallery Director Rod Buffington.

The show included the work of 124 artists from Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kentucky, Michigan, Missouri, and Wisconsin. The show, which featured some 128 pieces of art, was juried by Robert Hughes, art editor of Time magazine.

According to Buffington there were 1,853 slide entries in the show, which were narrowed to 243 by Hughes. These 243 pieces were then shipped to the Sargent Gallery where Hughes selected the final 128 pieces during a visit to the Eastern campus. Pieces in the show, said Buffington, included "paintings, weavings, sculpture, jewelry, prints and ceramics."

A special feature of the exhibition was the use of purchase awards through which the University, local businesses, the Eastern Alumni Association and some individuals sponsored the purchase of works of art. According to Buffington $6,500 in award money was paid to fourteen artists. The Best In Show Award, sponsored by the student government at Eastern and several private patrons, brought $2,000 to Gregory J. Huebner, a professor of art at Wabash College. Huebner's winning entry was titled "We Have Reached Our Cruising Altitude of 32,000 Feet" and was a sprayed acrylic on canvas. The picture became the property of the University.

The purchase award for the University was "Red Barn", an acrylic painting by Harriet Rex Smith, of Valparaiso, Indiana. The EIU Alumni Association's purchase award was

Portrait Of An Alumnus

An "honorable mention" award for a short story written in a contest at Eastern led alumna Louise Willet Stanek, '53, into a writing career that has stretched from Charleston to New York City and points in between. "Since then I have always continued to write," said Ms. Stanek in a recent letter to the Alumnus. And write she has, clear to the upper levels of one of America's major corporations. Currently staff assistant to the vice president of personnel at Philip Morris, Incorporated, she says she finds her present job both "challenging and rewarding."

Though she was born near Vandalia, in southwestern Illinois, Ms. Stanek "could always smell the sea." School came first, but "after graduation from Eastern I taught for two years and then became a stewardess for United Airlines to go in search of those seas," she related. While working as a "stew" she completed an MA in English at the University of Chicago. She also married a student there and traded her work with United for a job teaching English at Chicago's Bowen High School. Then, in 1967, a unique opportunity opened when she received a grant from the State of Illinois to start a demonstration center for students gifted in English. "For two years I did teacher training throughout the state. In 1969, I became the director of the English MAT program at the University of Chicago and began a Ph. D.," continued Ms. Stanek.

During this period she and her husband founded International Survey Research, a consulting company involved with attitude and moral studies of employees in Fortune 500 companies around the globe.

Since 1974 Ms. Stanek has lived in New York where she has been a consultant to large corporations and director of the Women in Management program at Marymount Manhattan College. Through this work she acquired her present position with Philip Morris. Her responsibilities involve her in "all aspects of hiring and developing the human resources within this organization," she explained, "and I often represent the company on the speaking platform and in public affairs operations."

Australian College Benefits From Eastern Dean's Visit

At the State College of Victoria, located in Melbourne, Australia, a bachelor's degree in home economics education is now being proposed, thanks to the help of Dr. Mary Ruth Swope, Dean of the School of Home Economics at Eastern.

During a two and one half month term as consultant to the State College of Victoria, Swope was able to assist the 2,500 student institution in requesting one of the first bachelor's degree programs in home economics education offered anywhere in Australia. The program is now being requested after an earlier proposal was rejected by the state's Committee on Submission and Accreditation last year.

Swope was selected to visit the college after a high ranking official from the school came to this country to observe the American approach to solving educational problems. He learned of Swope and Eastern from Dr. Hazel Spitz, head of home economics education at the University of Illinois. "He couldn't visit Eastern because his schedule would not permit it," Swope related in an interview in her office. "However he did write for our catalog. He also heard my name at other universities because of my former association with the National Council of Home Economics Administrators, first as treasurer and then as president."

Swope was first notified of the College of Victoria's interest in her while on vacation in Florida. "My secretary called and told me I had been invited to come to Australia for the summer," Swope recalled. "I didn't believe it at first and thought it was just a joke. After she told me it was really true, I began to give it some serious thought."

After returning to campus, Swope decided to go, if it could be arranged for her to be absent from her duties at Eastern. Word soon came from then President Gilbert C. Fite and Academic Affairs Vice President Peter Moody that arrangements had been made for a leave of absence. "Once it was determined I would be able to make the trip, arrangements were made for Mrs. Barbara Owens to serve as acting dean in my absence. It made the whole thing a great deal easier knowing that things would continue to get done while I was away. Barbara did a really fine job and it gave me a lot of peace of mind," she said.

Swope arrived on June 1 after visiting the University of Tokyo and a former student from the Philippines on the way. As it turned out technical assistance to get the program approved was not the only problem facing the school. "I feel one of my strongest skills is in the area of human relations," said Swope, "and it happened that this was their greatest need. One of my big jobs was really getting the faculty to work together so they could get on with the job."

Working in a country where home economics education is "about thirty to forty years behind" its development in the United States, her job was well defined. "The home economics program is much more limited there than in this country," Swope explained. "In Australia they concentrate on two main areas—what they term 'cookery' and needlecraft. Because they have modeled their school system so extensively on that of Great Britain, home economics was at one time not considered academically sophisticated enough for college study." Until now students in Australia have received a diploma at the end of a four-year college program but not a degree. Approval and implementation of the program which Swope helped develop will lead to the awarding of a degree.

Swope believes there is room for a major change in the Australian view of what in the United States has become an extensive field. The country now offers three degree programs in home economics education where last year none were available. According to Swope there is special interest, at least at the State College of Victoria, in the multi-disciplinary approach that is being used so effectively in the United States. "The president of the college feels this needs to be incorporated into their system of education and I think more of this will be done," Swope predicted, when asked about the future of the field in Australia.

In addition to her work with the new degree program, the dean had a unique opportunity to get a close view of student life in Australia. "When I first arrived I was offered the choice of a furnished apartment or a hostel which housed 53 young women, eight men and three counselors. I didn't hesitate an instant to choose the hostel," she said. And it turned out to be far more than just a residence for Swope. "Oh, what an experience," she recalled. "I immediately had 53 daughters and eight sons, and it gave me a wonderful chance to really see what the stu-

English Art Students Study At Eastern

Students and faculty members walking through the halls of Eastern's Fine Arts Center may be somewhat surprised to hear the distinct sound of British voices coming from Art Department classrooms and offices there this fall. The reason? Three British students from Portsmouth Polytechnic in Portsmouth, England are pursuing graduate studies in art at Eastern.

The three arrived on campus during late August to work on masters degrees in art. How did three British students learn of Eastern, some 4,000 miles from their homes? "We heard about it through Dick," (Eastern art professor A. Richard Moldroski) said Jacky Palman, a 26 year old painting major from London. "He did an exchange at Portsmouth last year. After we heard about the program here, we decided to come."

It's the second trip to America for Brenda Hawtin, 24, from Leamington Spa, Warwickshire. "I had planned to come to New York and then go on to Colorado anyway," she said. "I was living in Portsmouth and another girl who was there was supposed to take part in the program. When she dropped out, I got a call from the school (Portsmouth). I thought it was a good opportunity so I came."

Bryan Bartlett, 22, who was a fine arts undergraduate student at Portsmouth last year, came to Eastern to further his career in the fine arts. "I had a burning desire to paint, you might say," he explained. "It's rather difficult to get an M.A. in art in England and I wanted to come to America because it's an interesting country."

Moldroski agrees. "The opportunity for an English artist to spend some time in the United States is a very positive thing," he said. "The new dimension, the new culture that these kids are seeing is very good. New York, for example, is the art capital of the world and for them to be where they can at last have access to that is very beneficial for their development."

Once they were on campus, all three experienced some uniquely American problems, according to Moldroski. "There's a big cultural difference between here and England, even though we speak the same language. Our graduate program is much more structured than theirs is. And registration here on campus was mind boggling to them because they had never experienced anything like it," he explained.

All three, however, have been favorably impressed so far by the United States. "Charleston is quite a pretty town," said Brenda, "But I can't say that I'm too excited about the countryside between Charleston and Chicago. It's so flat." Some expectations, however, failed to materialized. "Charleston itself isn't exactly what I thought it would be. It's quieter and smaller, and it isn't at all like the pletion of their degrees. All three also hope to stay in America, at least for a limited period of time, after graduation. "I would like to stay here so I can sell my paintings," said Bryan. "There's more of a chance of that here than in England, I think."

Pending extension of their visas the three are unable to make firm plans at the present time, and Eastern's three British art students relax in an Art Department office. L to R they are Brenda Hawtin, Jacky Palman and Bryan Bartlett.

America we see on t.v. and in the movies," said Bryan. "I like it here though. I was in New York for a few hours and I didn't really like it, it was too dirty. Of course I wasn't in the best part, just around bus stations and such."

Moldroski views the presence of the three Britons as beneficial to other candidates for graduate degrees in the Art Department. "The broader view point presented to fellow graduate students and the interchange that results is beneficial both ways—for our students here and for them," he said.

Working largely in an independent study program the three Britons are all involved with painting, and hope to pursue art careers after the com-are concentrating on meeting graduation requirements for their degrees.

Are there any plans to bring more English students to the University? "Yes," said Moldroski, "we would like to bring additional graduate students from England to Eastern, but we have no special 'recruiting' plan to do so, and anyone who comes is judged solely on his work. And actually, it's getting more difficult to do this sort of thing because of increased restrictions from the government."

In the meantime Jacky, Brenda and Bryan are joining 172 other international students in bringing a cosmopolitan flavor to Eastern's campus.

At Spring Commencement

EIU To Honor Distinguished Alumni

Eastern Illinois University will again present Distinguished Alumni Awards this academic year, according to Charles Titus, Director of Alumni Activities. This will be the 5th year the awards have been presented. The honors will be awarded at the Spring Commencement Ceremonies, which will be held Saturday, May 14.

Nominations for the awards are now being accepted, said Titus. Those persons eligible for nominations are "alumni and former students of Eastern who have distinguished themselves in academic, literary, business, professional, public service and or service to the University and who through their accomplishments and service have brought credit to their alma mater."

There have been twenty such awards presented since the program was originated in 1972. The first five awards were given at the Opening Convocation of Eastern's Diamond Jubilee in the fall of 1973.

Recipients will be alumni who are selected by a joint faculty alumni committee appointed by the President of the University.

Nominations are to be submitted in writing and are to be accompanied by appropriate documentation. Documentation should include a listing and description of the achievements, accomplishments, and service of the individual concerned.

Nominations should be mailed to Distinguished Alumni Award Committee, Alumni Office, Eastern Illinois University, Charleston, Illinois 61920 no later than March 1. Titus stressed that names should be submitted as soon as possible. A nomination form is included within this magazine. Nomination forms are also available from the Alumni Office.

Due January 1

1977 Honorary Degree Nominations Sought

Nominations for recipients of honorary degrees at Eastern Illinois University are being accepted, according to Bert Holley, Chairman of the Honorary Degree Committee.

Holley said nominations may be made by faculty, students, staff and alumni. Nominations must be made in writing and supporting data must be submitted prior to January 1.

Nominations for persons who are not Eastern alumni should be sent to Bert Holley, Chairman, Honorary Degree Committee, Eastern Illinois University, Charleston, IL 61920. Names of alumni who are nominated should be forwarded to the Honorary Degree Committee, Office of University Relations and Alumni Services.

Holley said qualifications of nominees should include public service, degrees, publications, etc., and reasons for the nomination should be limited to 250 words.

The Committee will make its selection from the Board of Governors of State College and Universities' criteria that eligible persons "shall have achieved major distinction at the state or national levels in academic, literary, business, professional or public services endeavors."

Holley said the Committee "is empowered to interpret that criteria as it applies to each nomination and in terms of the supporting data supplied."

Nominating forms may be obtained from Holley or the Office of University Relations and Alumni Services.

Errett Warner Heads 1976-77 Alumni Fund Drive

Errett Warner, '25, will head Eastern's 1976-1977 Annual Fund Drive. A Lawrence County native, Warner is an inspector in the Department of Mines and Minerals of the State of Illinois.

A member of the Board of Directors of the Eastern Illinois University Foundation, Warner recently established two gift funds with the University. "I'm very happy to have the opportunity to help this way," said Warner, who was selected as drive chairman earlier this year by the Eastern Alumni Association's Executive Committee. "There's no question Mr. Warner will do a fine job for us," said Cal Stockman, '60, Alumni Association president. "I think he's an excellent choice."

Warner was a football star under Eastern's grand old man of athletics Charles "Pop" Lantz. He has been an active supporter of the University for several years and was a 1961 recipient of a Distinguished Alumni Award from Eastern.

Panthers

1930 Eastern Football Team Was Unique

With Eastern's football team on the verge of its most successful season in many a year, memories are taken back to a previous great team which certainly deserves the status as the most unique in Panther gridiron history.

The 1930 team finished at 6-1. A good record in anybody's book, but what made the season stand out was that not one opponent crossed its goal line in eight games. How then did it lose a game? Read on.

The 1928 and 1929 teams had been 13-1-1 and most Eastern followers, particularly the Teachers College News, as the Eastern weekly newspaper was known then, approached the 1930 season with apprehension.

The Blue and Gray had lost several starters from the previous year and the News was quoted as saying "... it's difficult at the present to understand how these starters can be replaced, but with 10 letter men returning and a swift bunch,

They're Panthers Now, But T'wasn't Always So ..

The Panthers have not always been the Panthers. Surprisingly enough, Eastern's athletic nickname is actually relatively new.

For many years the school colors, Blue and Gray, were used to describe the school's sports teams.

The circumstance and exact date of the derivation of Panthers can be pinpointed, although the reason why that particular 'tag' was chosen is still uncertain.

Back in 1930, the Teachers College News, forerunner of the Eastern News, decided it would be appropriate and more handy to have an "official" nickname.

So in conjunction with the Fox Lincoln Theatre, $5 worth of tickets was offered to the winner of a contest to "name" Eastern's athletic teams.

Athletic Director and Football Coach Charles "Pop" Lantz, football captain Gene Kintz and News Sports Editor Irvin Singler were chosen to select the winning entry. Several nicknames were submitted, although the exact number is not available, and on October 16, 1930 the News announced 'Panthers' as the winner.

Harland Baird, Paul Birthisel and Thelma Brock all submitted the winning nickname, and split the prize.

The judges explained they considered several names with an Indian background such as Kickapoos, Ellini and Indians, itself. Also, the school colors were considered in possible combinations such as Blue Racers, Blue Boys, Blue Battlers and Greyhounds.

The name chosen, though, was quickly accepted. The News used it extensively in that same October 16 issue. Gilbert Twist of the Decatur Review said, "Panthers is an appropriate one for this team and is one that has not been used much over the country."

This still appears to be the case. Although Panthers is not unique to Eastern, there are still but seven other colleges within the NCAA that use this nickname. The lone major college is the University of Pittsburgh. Division II teams are Northern Iowa and Prairie View A & M. Clark College of Atlanta, Middlebury (Vt.) College, Plymouth (N.H.) State and Virginia Union are the Division III teams.

freshmen candidates in sight the problems of developing a winner is not unlikely."

The team, known then as the Blue and Gray, competed in the Little 19 which actually included 22 teams in Illinois, both private and public. So odds were definitely against a conference title although the Blue and Gray had its star player returning. Johnny Powers had assumed the role of team captain when Gene Kintz, elected to the post in the winter, did not return to school until well into the season and therefore was ineligible.

After the first few weeks of practice the News commented, "The confidence supplied by a championship squad is not present with the 1930 bunch and the chances of the team getting cocky are less likely."

With the first game approaching, Lantz scheduled an intrasquad match with the first team (Blues) pitted against the second team (Grays). What appeared to be a resounding 26-0 win for the Blues did not come off that way to the News sports editor Irvin Singler. "The cocky Blues had nothing to be uppish about . . . they were lucky to be playing the scrubs on that day and not Normal," Singler said in reference to the first opponent, Illinois State.

But the Panthers began the season with a 15-0 win over Normal as Johnny Powers scored both touchdowns, one on a 45 yard punt return.

Shurtleff, a forerunner of SIU-Edwardsville then located at Alton, came to town for the first night game in Eastern history. A turnout of 2500 people was proclaimed as the largest crowd ever. The Alton based school was undefeated and the stage was set for the first real test.

Eastern 26, Shurtleff 0. Powers, Deverick, Stan Wasem (Patoka) and Dean Smith (Decatur) all scored TDs.

Bradley Tech, a new opponent, was up next and tied the Panthers, 0-0, as Hance's punting kept the visitors out of scoring range most of the day.

McKendree fell 23-0 as Eastern was criticized for coasting through the game. " . . . care will be taken to install more fight in the team play for Indiana State next weekend," warned the News.

However ISU posed little problem as Eastern scored 34 points, its highest total that year. Indiana State reached the one yard line late in the game but James Abraham (Casey), intercepted a pass at the goal line and returned it 55 yards to ensure the fifth straight shutout. Now the interest of the fans was building.

St. Viator, now defunct but then of Bourbonnais, lost 13-0 and the stage was set for the annual battle with Carbondale, one of the strongest teams in the midwest that year.

When the game ended, the Panthers' record of not allowing a touchdown was still intact but Eastern lost, 2-0.

How'd it happen? Well, it appeared everything was down the drain when Carbondale moved the ball to Eastern's one-yard line. But then the Blue and Gray line met the challenge and repelled Carbondale four times without a gain.

Pandemonium reigned but it was shortlived. Hance dropped back into the end zone to punt out of danger but, believe it or not, he stepped out of bounds for an automatic safety.

Just to show, though, that little has changed in the past 46 years, the first blame for the loss was laid upon the officiating.

The Eastern News quoted Leo Johnson, Millikin head coach who was scouting the game, as describing the refs as "terrible." The News added its own comment in the sports section: "A stronger term would be much more appropriate although it would not do to print it in this column."

So the scoreless season was down the drain with Hance's boo-boo but the "uncrossed goal line" record was still a possibility as Macomb came to

Alumni Purchases Watercolor

The Eastern Illinois University Alumni Association has acquired a watercolor painting through a purchase award in a recent art show held on campus.

The work, "Flower Series No. 40" was painted by Electra Stamelos, a Detroit area artist, and was an entry in the Paul Sargent Gallery's "7 for 76" seven state exhibit. The show was held in the Sargent Gallery from September 8 until October 13 and included over 124 pieces of art work. All entries in the show were judged by Robert Hughes, art editor of Time magazine.

piled record of 114-12-2. His overall Illinois high school record was 160-24-4.

town for the season finale in the Homecoming contest.

Eastern rebounded with a 21-0 victory, a 6-1-1 record and, although not among the ten undefeated, untied teams in the nation, the only one that did not allow a TD.

"This was the greatest fighting organization that has ever represented the school," boasted the News. Four seniors, 11 juniors, no sophomores and nine freshmen comprised the squad . . . just 24 players compared to Eastern's present day roster of approximately 80-90 names.

Jake Volc at 6-1, was the biggest player. No one weighed over 200 pounds and only one other player was over 6-0. So times, indeed, have changed but not the spirit that was displayed by members of that 1930 'Uncrossed Goal Line' team.

by Ms. Electra Stamelos of Livonia, Michigan, for her watercolor "Flower Series No. 40."

The show attracted over 3,000 visitors to the campus, according to Gallery figures. "It provided the students and community residents here with the opportunity to view the best of art in the mid-west. This type of show could normally only be seen in major galleries in Chicago, Cincinnati or St. Louis," said Buffington.

The show was "strong", and "received well" by most of those who saw it, the gallery director said. This also held true for art critic Hughes, who is, according to Buffington, "by far the best known art critic in America today." In his comment in the catalog accompanying the show, Hughes said: "It seems to me that there is a very strong kind of creative diffusion happening in the mid-west. The clear and serious will to produce responsible and informed art is as strong here as anywhere else in the country."

The show closed on October 13, and most of the work not purchased is now back in the hands of the artists, according to Buffington.

dent's needs were, their problems and their backgrounds. It was a real learning experience for me."

Swope's stay in Australia was a valuable professional experience as well. "I attended two national home economics conferences while I was there—one in Australia and one in Tasmania. It was a marvelous opportunity to see what is happening in the field in those countries."

Did she enjoy her stay in the land down under? "Immensely," the dean said, "and it was made even more so by my husband's encouragement. Don's support of my work there and his acceptance of my absence really made the whole thing possible."

English Journal, Mr. Stanek hopes someday to publish a novel. "A rough draft of one sits on my desk today," she revealed, and "when there is world enough and time enough, I'll polish that and hope for publication. Emily Bronte has always been my alter ego."

Ms. Stanek, who describes herself at "a gypsy at heart" says she dreams of someday "living on the rocky coast of Maine with a horse and a typewriter." In the meantime she uses her spare time to "ski, swim, go to the theatre and collect antiques" while living in her New York City Brownstone.
